

Student Council Only Does it For the Free Breakfast

By Satchel Cornspeaker

DEERFIELD, IL- We all thought that those student council guys were good people. But just yesterday they proved us all wrong.

President of the Student Council Emailing Committee, Gordon Thawdy, recently confessed that the only reason any-one does Student Council is for the free breakfast.

When we asked young Rob Canter why he did student council his response just backed up the long suspected truth. "You have no idea how good those pancakes are."

A rumor was that the student council members were able to work harder on a full stomach. Any confirmations of that report are yet to be found.

'You have no idea how good those pancakes are'

So if you see any of them in the hallways roaming the corridor smelling extra like syrup just look at them and say, "We figured it out. Everyone knows you're only in it for the free food."

Professor Snape To Teach AP Chemistry at DHS

By Flagstaff Roberts

HOGWARTS- After our beloved Professor Snape left Hogwarts in the 6th Harry Potter book he was unemployed. Poor Snape.

That was why, being the accepting folk that we are at Deerfield High School, hired him to teach Advanced Placement Chemistry.

When he applied for a teaching job at Deerfield his application said that he preferred teaching Defense of the Dark Arts but would if necessary, teach Potions.

We were sad to break the news to our dear Professor that we had neither of those classes here at Deerfield. We did tell him that chemistry was the closest thing we had, and when he showed us a few of those combustion reactions, the deal was sealed.

We were hesitant, however, to hire Snape because we knew of his dark background. It was rumor that he had killed a few people. But that was neither here nor there.

Self Conscious Teen Receives Children's Menu

by Captain Underscoreboard

It was a dark and stormy night. The pitter-patter of rain on the windowsill reminded the young stable boy how much work could be done if only it wasn't raining. He sat in the stable, as many stable boys do, and looked upon his most faithful of steeds.

This is not the story of a stable boy.

This last weekend at the local Chili's Bar and Grill, a seemingly average family entered the confines of the restaurant in search of a home-cooked meal. But all was not as plain and simple as it seemed.

For as the family was to be taken to there seats, the eldest 14 year old son noticed a trend that was strikingly familiar.

"They did it again mom, they gave me that stupid children's menu again," said Bernie Borgenstein to the dismay of his family and other people in the restaurant. "Every time they do this, it's like they think I'm not mature enough for the big boy menus. At this rate, I'm never going to get a girlfriend."

At receiving the childrens menu he turned a bright scarlet in the cheeks and made all efforts to switch seats. He then threw a temper tantrum like a 7 year old.

"I was actually quite appalled by my son's behavior that evening, I usually don't allow the word stupid to be used in my house. From the looks of that temper tantrum, he probably should have gotten that kids menu!" declared Marlene, the boy's embarrassed mother.

"He really was creating quite a scene," busboy Chuck Sanderwagon said.

However, this wasn't the first time this has happened to Bernie. His short stature and passé hairdo had caused him to receive endless turmoil from his peers, teachers, family members, and assorted elected local officials.

Friends would be among that list if he had them, which to numerous reports he doesn't. When asked about the friends he

by Romulus Glenn

CHEYENNE, WY—After what seemed to be a larger than life, but still expected, 15 minutes of fame, Latin music mogul Ricky Martin found himself atop the world.

"You cannot believe how good it feels to be here right now. I mean, to think that a couple months ago I was just some very good-looking soap opera star and now I've come to this...doing virtually the same thing" Martin allegedly said in a 1999 press conference.

But Martin's good looks, and gung-ho personality have not taken him to the promised land of perpetual riches, friends and even

Igneous Rock Sells For 3.2 Million on Ebay

By Lloyd Samskadon

SOMEHWHERE IN GREENLAND- The seller Tami Redvan really didn't think anyone would buy her igneous rock. Thats why she put it up on Ebay. If you asked anyone else in the world, they probably would have said the same thing too. I mean, come on, who would buy an igneous rock, let alone an igneous rock for more than $10?

Jeff Wobberman obviously wanted it. He wanted it 3.2 million dollars bad. We asked him what prompted this buy. He replied, "Well I've loved rocks since I can remember." We asked his parents if there was any truth to this. Mother Marie Wobberman confirmed this. "The first word he ever said was igneous. Not mama or dada." And then she burst into tears. Jeff Wobberman later told us how huge of a rock fanatic he is. "I mean I have every type of igneous rock that they ever made. If you want to talk about it my screen name is iluvrocks0304 and my website is www.iamtherockdudemansheebea.com. Its all there."

Local Kid Thinks He Can Just Make His Own Oil

By Ply Obbert

BAY-TOWN, NJ – As Frank O'Solly sat in his basement playing Halo on Xbox for the eleventh straight hour, his mother came down and turned on the news channel. The local ABC news for the area was detailing the extreme raise in gasoline prices and how it had to do with the increase demand and those guys in Saudi Arabia. That gave the little mischievous Frank a great idea of his own. Those who were watching him said he ran out of his house into the middle of his street and announced to the world, "I'm going to make my own oil!" He then ran in his lab and was there for three consecutive weeks before his dad knocked and the door and broke the news to him. "Son, you just can't make your own oil." After that Frank ran away to California where he started his own restaurant.

baked goods. The 26-year old Martin decided to take what he called "a little catnap". But what appeared to be a minor disappearance from the limelight such as those of the Baha Men, those who wrote the Macarena, and Molly Ringwald, eventually turned into a catastrophic vanishing of the Latin Lover. After fading away from Hollywood in late 1999, it came into hindsight that Ricky Martin had sank to the bottom of Davey John's Lock. 'What he found was unfathomable' Until just recently, almost everyone had believed that Ricky

Martin had completely fallen off the face of the planet, or perhaps even perished. On 7/19/05, archeologist JoJo McHenry, a fiery young bloke from Murray State University was exploring a Wyoming cave, just miles north of Yellowstone national park. What he found was unfathomable. He found the Hispanic hip-hopper lying curled up in a ball in the corner of a cave now called Barakamatu Mountain. He was listening to the Macarena by Los Del Rio on repeat and it appears as if he has been doing so for the last five years. Others who have listened to the Macarena for years straight include anybody who ever listened to music in the mid-late 90's. It appears as if Ricky Martin is just one of us again. Just living in a cave.

Rock Paper Scissors Tourney Turns Catastrophic

STUDENT UNION-Hopes were up with a cycle 34 day lingering in the near future. But, little did we know that controversy would break out in the serene "Student Union."

A game was being played in tournament format with all three essentials. Rock-Paper-Scissors. Fierce and mighty competitor Johnathan Woodson was cleaning out the field of 16 contenders all competing for the right to be declared "Rock-Paper-Scissors Champion," and a plaque in the Student Union.

With referees Peter Cullins and Bob Jamison closely eyeing the players, there was clearly no cheating going on, or at least we thought so.

With the semifinals coming to a closure, the competitive attitude was too much for defending champ Yoky Flanders to handle.

We had our final. A classic duo. David vs. Goliath, Ali vs. Frazier and now Woodson vs. Gunnersberg.

In a series best of 5, the score was at a deadlock 2-2. Hearts would be broken and careers would be made. No matter what happened, both of their lives were going to change forever.

Woodson chose rock, and Gunnersberg, choose the reliable paper (picture above). Woodson was petrified. Gunnersberg jumped in victory and pumped his fist through the air like he just dont care.

But, it appeared Gunnersberg had released his paper split seconds after Woodson had released the daring rock. Bob Jamison ‘Hearts would be broken’ reviewed the tape and it was clear that he did make his decision too late. A decision that has changed his life.

This scandal will go down as one of the biggest in Deerfield High School Township history along with the time Randolph lost his essay in the library. And to this moment, may Jon Woodson’s plaque lay in the Student Union with pride.

Mother Still Brags About “Cute” Bar Mitzvah Theme

HIGHLAND PARK- Mother of two from Highland Park, Illinois, Edith Bergbaum is still bragging about her son's cute bar mitzvah theme.

This comment would not seem to outrage many people, had it not been that she is sixty-five years old and her son, Abe Bergbaum is currently forty-one years of age.

When recently interviewed by The Flipside, Edith claimed, "Oh, I can't help it. It's just so cute!"

What was the theme, we asked. "Well, he was always a big fan of safari and other wild animals. He had pictures of lions, gnats, armadillos, giraffes, and of course, the wallaby, all hanging in his room. So at the party, each table was a different animal. Isn't that adorable!" she clamored.

Yes, Edith. Yes.

How has this affected her son, Abe's life? Well, Abe is currently paying off his student loans and living in a diner eating Lucky Charms® out of the box (with skim milk). He spends most of his time in a Denny’s in southwest New Mexico. So, to be honest, it hasn't affected him whatsoever.

This claim by his mother though, has allowed him to keep his status quo of the town, maintaining homeostasis throughout his long-

I Really Don't Know Which Super Power I Want

by Austin Graypad

Recently, I have been asked about super heroes, or more specifically, super powers. What super power is the greatest super power of all? Well, as an M.D. in super hero affairs, I have come to learn that super powers are a very delicate thing and must accent the way you will use them.

If there was any one super power to have it would definitely be immortality. The tricky thing about super powers is to get combinations correct. Being tortured for all of eternity by evildoers can come with immortality and therefore, it must be paired with invincibility.

With the knowledge that one cannot feel physical pain and cannot die, courage is not in absence. Fighting will be easy because you can never get tired, and because you never get hurt, getting old comes in only age, not appearance.

For those of us that just want super powers for the fun of it or because we are lazy, the perfect power would be teleportation paired with invisibility.

Invisibility is a very touchy subject in the super world. For one thing, would ones clothes become invisible with the person who occupies them? Would you be able to walk through walls and furniture? Would dogs still be able to see you? Could you still make noise? All of these questions need to be answered when picking the perfect strength of invisibility. Personally, I would say that clothes and anything (or anyone) that touches the person that is going invisible, while he is going invisible, should go invisible with him or her. Any solid could be walked through and no dog would be the wiser.

Teleportation is another story. There is only one big question that needs to be answered before choosing this power; do you have to see the place before you teleport to it? The answerer is yes. If one wants to teleport to Quebec to pet a Mounity, then he just can't think the word Quebec, he might either land on an almanac under the Canada section, or in the blistering cold of the French section of Canada. He could end up anywhere in the entire province. This is not good. POOF! To the fridge for a soda! The more specific, the better.

Super powers are a touchy subject and when choosing one, one can miss a detail so important that his life might be ruined. So heed this warning, before conducting any crime fighting, with or without super powers, please do some research on the subject first and ask you doctor.

OK, Come on Teachers, What's up With All This Homework?

By Melbo Azurky

DEERFIELD- All right everyone, I've been going to school for all this time and I have a big question for all of you. What's up with all of this homework?

Seriously, we go to school for school for almost seven hours five days a week for the whole year. Do you know how much time that is? Let me give you an idea. Its 6,552,349 seconds. Per year. That means over 85 billion seconds of time spent in school. And they still need extra time to give you homework! Isn't 85 billion seconds enough?

We need to develop a more efficient system if you can't finish all the work in 85 billion seconds.

Homework is outrageous! Many esteemed firms have published scientific studies on the detrimental effects homework has on the students over physical, mental, social, and spiritual wellness.

For example, the well-known Department of Health just published a study revealing the negative nature of homework. I'm not making it up! Look below!

Also a sample test was conducted on a student to see the first hand effects of the dreadful homework.

A picture of the specific Ronny Gray at age three before being corrupted by homework. Just ten years later, Ronny had aged and gotten this new homework. Look what it did to him!

Look! It's proven. Homework increases wrinkles. You think I'm making it up? I'm not making it up! Look below!

All right, I cannot stand you stubborn people with all of your homework. You know what else? Homework increases your chances of attracting the chicken pox. Why do you think everyone gets the chicken pox? It's because they all get homework!

We even talked about it in health!

BEFORE HOMEWORK EXPOSURE

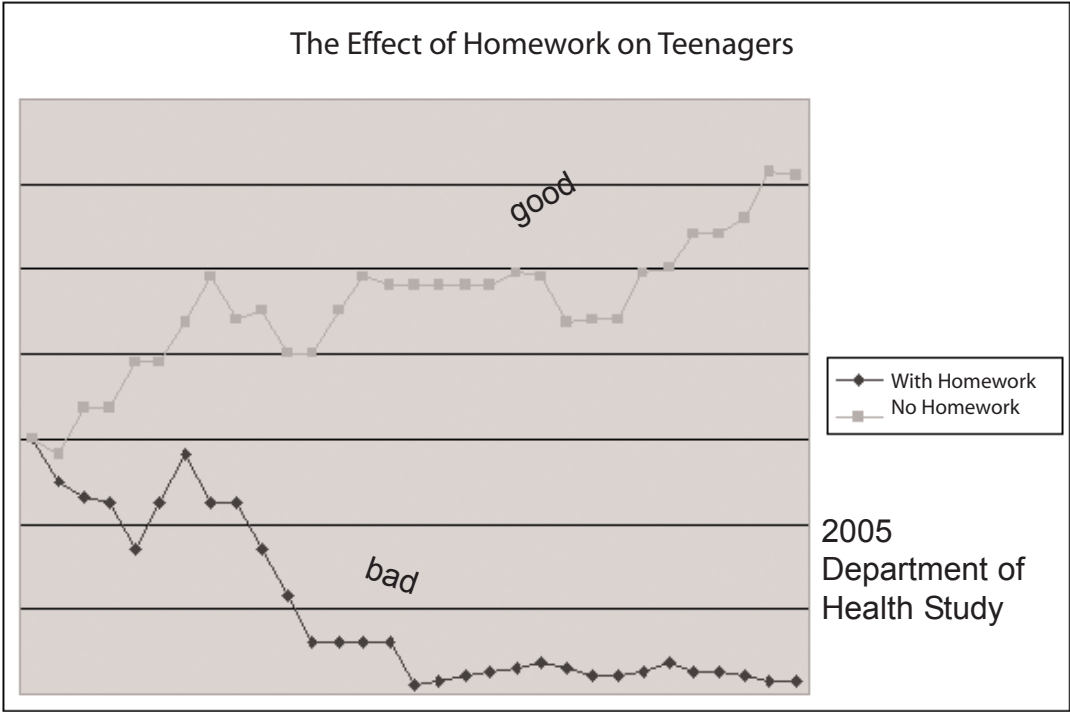

AFTER TEN YEARS OF HOMEWORK EXPOSURE

Homework is unhealthy! It's true. So just stop with all this nonsense and get rid of homework.

Seriously, there has to be a better way to do this! You could just teach it all in class and that way it would ensure that people paid attention. Because if everything depends on what happens in school, people are bound to care.

It's all true. So let's hop to it and get rid of this bad, cruel, unnecessary, corrupt homework institution.

Deerfield High School was not about to have this fate.

We had a talk with Professor Snape about his lesson plans for the first couple weeks of school.

"Why, we will start them off with something easy," he said in his sinister voice. "We may boil newts into phosphorous or something of the like."

Overall the Deerfield High School populace is honored to have the renowned Professor Snape as a teacher.

Bald Man Receives Hair Transplants, Life Goes Haywire

by Rodney Eggsburg

SAN ANTONIO- Times were tough. The economy was in shambles. The country was at war at all possible borders. And one bald man, Hans Bundleberry had had enough...of his head being bare of hair.

"It was like my forehead was my full head," said Bundleberry, some many months ago. He had many frugal attempts to try to cover up his bald head of hair, but they were to no effect. His self-confidence was down and his moral was low, and his toupee, which he had come to name Marlene, was mustier than ever.

He had to put it all to an end. In a final desperate measure he began a dark, treacherous journey towards a surgery some refer to as hair transplants.

"I really didn't see why he had to get them," said wife Bertha Bundleberry, "I had always loved his smooth bald head. It made me feel superior to him. I could flaunt my flowing hair out in front of his baldy bald face and there was nothing he could do about it except sit there amidst being bald."

Refusing to heed to his wife's warnings, he went through with the surgery, and all seemed well for many months. There was love in his life again, he had received perks at the workplace, and had received a complimentary Caribou Coffee mug for a job well done. Yet something was not right...

Despite the surgery, Hans received nightmares continuously for evening after terrifying evening. In these nightmares, his former toupee stretched fifty feet high and chased him down until he was cornered, and

by Anfernee Van Tarkus

MASSACHUSETTS-Leading donut and coffee provider Dunkin’ Donuts has announced that it is changing its name to ‘Donuts That You May Dunk If You Want To’ following a lawsuit from disgusted consumer Michael Coomer. “I was outraged by the name and the implications that it had” says Coomer. “Although I prefer to dunk my donuts, I wanted to have the official right to choose not to, and I am thrilled with the name change.”

“Free country?” continued Coomer, “Let me tell you something folks, this is not a free country. There will always be those telling you what to do and what not to do, to dunk and what not to dunk. I am a civil rights pioneer a la Malcolm X, only for donuts.”

Coomer is planning on continuing his tirade against politically incorrect fast food chains with hopes of renaming hamburger staple Burger King ‘Burger King or Queen’ and is urging cookie supplier Mrs. Fields to keep her maiden last name.

“We are ecstatic about the name change” exclaimed an anonymous Dunkin’ Donuts representative. “We can finally express our openness to dunkers and non-dunkers alike.” However, there is opposition to this stunning announcement.

“I’ve been dunking my donuts here for going on 55 years, and I’m not going to have some left-wing treehugers tell me that I have the right not to” says change-resistant and angry old man Clarence Hubert. “I fought in the Korean War for the right to dunk my donuts and not be given the option not to.”

The National Association of Housewives Who Like to Complain (NAHWLTC) agreed. “Dunkin’ Donuts are now corrupting our moral values” said a spokesperson for the association. “If I gave you the option to not jump off a bridge, would you do it?”

The battle rages on and will likely never be resolved but the Flipside will continue with full coverage until this war between people with nothing else to do comes to its bitter, cold end.

Congress Changes National Anthem to "Holla Back Girl"

By Gregory Colwen

In light of recent events and pop culture influences, the United States Congress has changed its national anthem to the ever-popular jabberwocky that is "Holla Back Girl."

Congressional spokesperson, Renard Langert, spoke of the change. "We feel as if it is very important that when the young persons of this American country recite their national anthem, they feel the effervescent need to remove their shirts, twist it around their heads, spin it like a helicopter, and shake their tailfeathers."

Even though the current national anthem may be a little lackluster, is it really necessary to change it to a song that has taken the nation by storm?

The Pop Culture Department of Love spokesman, Quentory Stillwater said this: "Speaking personally, I love this decision. It is very befitting of this nation. 'I ain't no holla back girl' really represents the liberty of this society as a whole. Because if you really think about it, aren't we all 'Holla back girls'?" No, not really.

Stillwater said that this country truly has "a few times been around that track. Our national anthem has been a little bit mundane, and after Congress refused to change it to 'The World's Greatest', this was the next best choice."

A controversial decision? Yes. Shocking? Maybe. Profound? Indubitably.

Common mistakes made by Super Heroes-

- Don't combine the ability to make water and to make fire because then you'd end up with some weird name like "Steam Boy," or "Mr. Mist."
- Flying is not all that it is cut out to be. When above the clouds, the sun it hot. Not to mention the bugs flying in your nose, mouth, and eyes. Also, try breathing in that high of altitude.
- Don't combine the ability to control animals and ability to become any animal. If you get caught under your own spell... disaster.
- Reading minds is fun until you learn something you don't want to know, "I can't believe her supposed Gucci purse is just a cheap imitation."
- Time travel is always disastrous
- If you have a super name starting with "doctor" or, "the ultimate," you are setting yourself up to be a villain
- Running at the speed of light is tiring work
- Being a karate master does not go far in this age of technology
- Controlling weather is a horrible power due the fact that the enemy can see where you've been and where you are going by switching to the Weather Channel.

Stupid powers-

- Turning into water
- Sumo wrestling ability
- Virus controller
- Spontaneous combustion ("Mr. President, the world could be saved by..." BOOM)
- Honestly, when will X-ray vision come in handy?
- Controlling vegetation ("Grow Cucumber!")
- Breathing fire started the rule of no kissing on the first date
- Ability to speak in rhyme
- Ability to taste and identify all mustards
- Ability to talk to animals (squirrels are so chatty)
- Knowing all prime numbers
- Knowing the recipe for the perfect lemonade

So for all of you who are planning on becoming a super hero soon I advise you to beware, and eat your green vegetables.

Ask Tobias

Hey Kids!

My name is Tobias P. Rizzle, and my job here at The Flip Side is to help you!

Lets say you've been searching your tiny inexperienced noggins for the answer to a question that just needs answering, but it can't be found! Well I'm here to help you with that! You can send me any questions that you would like to be answered in this beautiful new paper! Just drop me a line at TobiasPRizzle@gmail.com and that little e-Postman will deliver your email to my computer!

Since I don't have that many questions to answer because this is my first advice column, I'll just give you some tips to help with school in general!

-Are the upperclassmen giving you young and tender freshmen trouble in the hallway? Well there is an easy solution for this! Simply travel through your schools state of the art ventilation system. It has been transporting air and vermin through the school for decades, and now its time to add children to that list.

-Attend class

-Drink 8 glasses of water everyday

Since this is my first column, I have yet to receive any questions from you soon to be loyal readers, but I did discover this email in my next door neighbor John's trash as I was fishing through it. I'm pretty sure it was an email, well, I can't be sure. It sure is hard to read a letter after it has been through a paper shredder!

Dear Tobias: I had this really cool way that I was going to ask this girl to homecoming. Lets say for our purposes her name is JoAnne. Her name is not JoAnne, its Tina. But that's not the point.

She's really hot and I wanted to ask her to homecoming but I wasn't sure how, but then I got this really good idea. I hired a mariachi band to follow her around school all day and to sere-nade her with the classics. Then at the end of the day when she went home, they sang a special song I wrote for her. It was called, "Will you go to homecoming with me because I spent a lot of money on a mariachi band because I was too nervous to ask you, but if you say yes, I feel that we will have a good time".

I think it was a great song, but it turned out that she already has a date. I have one other problem, I didn't have any money to give the band, and even though that their music didn't work, they still want 50 clams a piece.

They told me that they would give me back my little sister when I pay them. But I have bigger problems, where am I going to get a date?

Sincerely,
Hopeless for Homecoming

Dear Hopeless: The best way to handle this situation is found in the wise words of the great Mr. Miyagi. As he once said to Daniel-son, “Wax on, wax off.” Because as we all know a homecoming date is like wax. So just get a new thing of wax. And then wax on. Wax on son.

Dear Tobias: I was eating lunch a couple days ago just as usual. But then, as the meal concluded, and after I had thrown out my lunch, I realized I had thrown out my ID. What should I do?

-Lost in the Lunchroom

Dear Lost: There's not much you can do. You'll just have to tough it out, walk to the dumpster and dive in. If you search there for no more than 23 minutes, I am confident you will find something that looks somewhat like and ID.

Well, I'm obviously out of tips. So send me your questions and I'll be anxiously checking my email every 5 minutes waiting for them!

each time right before the toupee was about to gobble him up into its thick follicles, the dream would end.

He looked to resolve his problem through the help of renowned psychiatrist Dr. Paulo Rollintown. Yet upon his arrival at the appointment he was horrified. His toupee was mysteriously resting atop the psychiatrists' head. He dashed to his car, only to find it on the dashboard. He skimmed through his OC Season 2 DVD, only to find every character, even the glorious Mischa Barton, to be wearing his toupee.

He woke up. It had all been a bad dream, everything from the gobbling to the appointment.

He turned over to his beautiful wife, or rather what used to be his beautiful wife. Overnight, it had seemed, all her hair had fallen out and she was as bald as he had been. She seemed to make the motions of brushing her hair, and yet, as far as Hans could see, she wasn't brushing any hair at all.

"How's my hair look this morning?" asked Mrs. Bundleberry, who was fishing for a compliment.

He was faced with two grim choices; either offer a hairpiece to her, an idea that terrified him, or live with a bald wife for the rest of his days.

I am selling a goldfish named Cronus. He was a good fish until about four days ago when he might have eaten his children goldfish. I can't really stand him any more. If you want to buy him, he likes to eat bread and is very paranoid. Call 1-800-4CRONUS for more details. The price is negotiable.

For sale: Two ball-point pens. $4.00 each. Contact the bookstore in that main hall that no one knows the name of.

The number of doors at DHS. That's it. There's nothing clever about it. Seriously, Vernon Cappon spent two hours counting them. Next week. Knobs. Wait, shouldn't it be the same number? I heard they store knobs in the studio theatre...see if there is any truth to that.
