

THE FLIPSIDE

Digest

5th year, No. 92, Issue 18

February 11, 2010

www.dhsflipside.com

*Free everywhere; $2.30 Canada

Super Bowl Makes Tuesday Fatter

By Buford Stetson

MIAMI, FL -- As Tracy Porter intercepted Peyton Manning's pass late in the fourth quarter and ran it back for a touchdown, I was quick to realize two things. For starters, it meant that my gambling addiction had finally yielded a reward. After betting on everything from to coin toss, to the number of television appearances of Kim Kardashian (which was surprisingly zero!), to the odds of a player, or Pete Townshend, being carted off the field, I finally won a bet. After sticking to my philosophy that any bet with the odds of are 10,000 to one is worth taking, my purse of 40 dollars from the game of squares almost compensated my 56 dollars in expenses. But this miraculous occurrence seemed mundane compared to the next thing that I realized: Peyton Manning had thrown the Super Bowl.

Peyton Manning does not throw interceptions. Peyton always performs well under pressure, and with his father watching Peyton's drive ensured a dramatic comeback. But there was one flaw in this comeback: Peyton was playing for far more than a football game. Manning had a list of reasons to throw the Super Bowl, and they were on everyone's minds. After Hurricane Katrina devastated New Orleans in 2005, the city and the economy experienced lasting effects. Peyton understood what a Super Bowl victory meant to New Orleans: a chance to celebrate the town and finally begin their recovery process. Peyton also understood what the Super Bowl meant to him: a chance to celebrate the most epic Mardi Gras of all time. New Orleans is currently feeling the effects of the most elaborate party coordination in history. A recipe of a Super Bowl victory two days away from Fat Tuesday, an incredibly lenient and non-existent police force, and famous streets named after alcoholic beverages could only create one delicious confection: the anti-Friday night in Deerfield. Said Peyton on Tuesday, "Dude! Totally worth it! This is the craziest party I've ever been to, and trust me: I've been to some crazy parties. I've literally got beads of sweat rolling down my face if you know what I'm saying."

But apparently, the story digs even deeper. Spotted alongside Manning in the French Quarter was Minnesota Vikings Quarterback Brett Favre. Amidst a group singing of "Party in the USA," Favre was quoted as saying to Peyton, "It was all totally worth it man! I mean the interception in the NFC Championship was embarrassing, but at least it means I'll get to retire and then unretire and play next year! I may be old, but I can still take the shots if you know what I'm saying." The two then exchanged an elaborate handshake and continued nodding their heads like "yeah." So, maybe football really is just a game. Maybe the Super Bowl isn't as important as we all deem it to be. When push comes to shove, it's all up to the players if you know what I'm saying.

New Best Pickup Line for DHS Students: Whipping Out The CPR Certification Card

District 113 Disappoints Yet Again As Students Are Forced To Watch Blizzard From Inside The School

With Recent Snow, DHS Courtyard Finally Has Decent Reason To Be Closed, Though It Has Been Closed The Majority Of Winter

Editor's Note

Last week was not a good one for the written word. First, some idiot thought terrorism was funny and wrote something dumb and destructive on a bathroom stall door. Also, we printed something irresponsible in The Flipside. Whether you know what I am talking about or not is not important. What's important is that the person we wronged knows we're sorry and that everyone else knows they can look to The Flipside for quality, relatively tame satire here at DHS. Enjoy this digest and be careful with your words, Deerfield. They have consequences.

By Elijah Brisk

Every so often, as a student one finds it necessary to take a day off from school. It happens to all of us, but the question is not when to stay home, but rather how to achieve this difficult task. There are a few different ways to accomplish this feat, and I am here to give a few tips:

1) The Ferris Bueller: This is the typi-

Area Student Wins Contest to See Who Can Get Less Sleep

By Gunther Hausmann

After a near-sleepless night of doing homework and going on Facebook, Junior Kristen Holbrook declared that she received fewer hours of sleep than you. Her mere three hours of sleep constitute just one third of the sleep that the National Institute of Health recommends for teens, but regardless, Kristen maintains that the dangers of sleep deprivation are not important.

The only thing that matters is that she got less sleep than you.

"I went to bed at three a.m. and woke up at six," Kristen reports. "That's three hours. Yea. How much did you get?"

The tone Kristen takes would suggest that there was some type of competition going on to see who could be the least responsible about getting to bed on time, but at this point, it seems that Kristen is taking pride in not getting a lot of sleep for no reason.

It has also been reported that Kirsten jumped in on several conversations at the blocks when she heard people talk about how tired they were. Evidently, she really wants to make it known that nobody get less sleep than her and that nobody else is allowed to feel tired.

Staying Home For Dummies

cal faking of the illness. Ferris did it, and so can you. Just rent the movie and study up. Clammy hands and a hot forehead is all you need...

2) The Refuel: Yes, it has been done. Just give the old, "I feel reeeally exhausted. If I stay home, I will definitely be able to work harder the next few weeks." It works wonders, but you really have to sell it...

3) Honesty: If you actually are sick, the worst thing to do is lie. Just tell the truth! A bit of undercooked meat or a bad egg won't hurt your chances for this option (or your conscience...)

Hopefully, these ideas helped you to start planning your own day off. If not, I encourage you to think of your own ideas. Be Creative!

I'm Lost. I've Gone to Look for Myself. So if I Get Back Before I Return, Please Tell Me to Wait.

THE FLIPSIDE CRYPTOGRAM CHALLENGE: Solve the Cryptogram, write down your name, then put your copy of The Flipside in locker I192. We will have a drawing to see who wins the sweet Flipside t-shirt!!!

QUOTE "Ohhh, thank you! Somebody up there heard my prayer. Sort of."

-Entire Student Body Tuesday night after hearing the news about the late arrival for Wednesday Morning

REBUS PUZZLES

Can you guess the common word or phrase portrayed below?

last weeks answers: PINEAPPLE EXPRESS, MEDIUM RARE, TEA TIME, WI-FI

Infographic

Stone (40,000 B.C.)

iPhone 3G (2008)

MMS	X	X
Video recording	X	X
Videocall	X	X
Changeable memory cards	X	X
Touchscreen	X	✓

CRYPTOGRAM CHALLENGE

This is a simple substitution code. Each letter is replaced by a different letter. Try to decode the message or quote below. Last week's Winner: Naomi Schitkovitz. Come find us for your t-shirt!

HINT: B=A

K UGPE EJ ZGPR G QGB JH EZD UJSTN KP QX ZJCOD, GPN EZDP K'Q RJPPG BCE BKPO
KPEJ GTT EZD TJAGEKJPO EZGE K'ID ESGIDTDN EJ. WCE HKSOE K'Q RJPPG ZGID EJ ES-
GIDT EJ EZD EJB EUJ AJSPDSO JH EZD QGB OJ KE UJP'E HGTT NJUP. - QKEAZ ZDNWDSR

LAST ISSUE'S ANSWER: "WHEN I WAS A KID, I USED TO PRAY EVERY NIGHT FOR A NEW BICYCLE. THEN I REALIZED THAT THE LORD DIDN'T WORK THAT WAY. SO I STOLE ONE AND ASKED FOR FORGIVENESS," — EMO PHILLIPS

SUDOKU

Fill in the grid so each column, row, and 3x3 box has the numbers 1 through 9.

Level: Ohhh Boy...

				3		6	8	9
		6						7
	4				8		2
			5			2
5	3		6		2		4	8
		7			1
	7		1				9
1						7
6	8	2		5

Note: All names and stories are fictional, unless public figures are being satirized. Remember, these are all jokes.

JUMBLE

Unscramble these four ordinary jumbles, and use the letters in circles to answer the final question.

THE PEOPLE WHO FAVORED
THE EXAM WERE...

SOLVT
[] [] [] [] []

CHORP
[] [] [] [] []

SLAVEG
[] [] [] [] []

REBUTT
[] [] [] [] []

[] [] [] [] [] [] [] []

LAST ISSUE'S ANSWERS: BLIMP, PINCH, SAVANT, SEESAW
What the bookie called his strongest wager: ALPHABET