THE FLIPSIDE Diaest

4th Year, 28th Digest, Issue No. 66

June 4, 2009

www.dhsflipside.com

*Free Everywhere; $2.30 Canada

Bo Obama Eats Own Vomit, Is Adorable

Teachers Also Ready to Get Out of Here

Toll Booths Installed in Halls to Increase Funding

Where's Waldo? Longest "Hide-And-Go-Seek" Game In History Ends

A new world record was set last week, here in the quaint town of Deerfield. The longest hide-and-go-seek game on record was finished when Samantha Keebler found Waldo Scottsdale after a long and arduous search.

Samantha Keebler, along with Waldo and several other peers, began playing this casual pastime on a warm August afternoon in 1994. Witnesses report that as soon as Samantha had begun to count, Scottsdale ran off into the woods in order to find a hiding place. Recounts one Sam Carnell, a fellow hider in the now-famous game: "Waldo had always been much more competitive than the rest of us when it came to hide-and-go-seek. Supposedly, at the age of five, he hid in the washing machine for half a day in an attempt to elude his baby-sitter. And I heard he stays up into the wee hours of the night planning hiding strate-

Samantha found all the other kids approximately eight minutes subsequent to her countdown. However, Scottsdale was nowhere to be seen. Samantha and the rest of the group searched the surrounding forest and rural area for two hours. When they finally got bored, the children went home

Jeremy had specified prior to this game that "helicopters and heat-seeking technology ruined the integrity of the sport", so no searches of any kind were organized. 5405 days, 5 hours, and 44 minutes later, Samantha, 29, now an efficiency consultant at a small advertising firm in Manhattan, was home on a visit for the summer. She trekked down to the base of a nearby bridge for her daily worship to the sun god, and as she walked underneath the bridge, a nauseating stench overwhelmed her. The offensive odor, in fact, was the remains of the most dedicated hide-and-go-seeker ever to play the game.

"Waldo's spine was misshapen from extensive time in the squatting position, and he had clearly not moved from his hiding spot at any point" Dr. Michael T. Cummins announced in a press conference held yesterday, "and he appeared to have survived under the bridge for several weeks eating only dirt and discarded cans of diet Rite And who can survive on that kind of diet?" Deerfield is commemorating Waldo's historic achievement by hiding his burial site somewhere in the town, and then rewarding a $5 coupon to McDonalds to whoever can find it first.

Junior Makes Bad Choices Over Weekend

By George Minkowski

DEERFIELD— Upon leaving classes before the weekend, three words are ubiquitous among teachers. It is advice that started being given to high-school students during the 60s around the time of Woodstock and has been passed down to us. "Make good choices."

DHS Junior Greg Morgan ignored this advice as he left school last Friday, and proudly reports that he indeed did not make good choices over his two day hiatus from school and acted in a manner that the faculty would find regrettable.

"Make good choices? Psh. As if. During my weekend, I made bad choices everyday," Greg tells Flipside reporters. "It was awesome. Me and my friends, hangin' out, doing things my teachers would object to. Now that is how you spend a weekend."

According to Greg, not all of the bad decisions he made were related to drugs and alcohol, although many of them were. Morgan also lit [stuff] on fire and bought 20 shares of GM and invested in several other American industrial companies.

Even after loosing $1,000, his parents' trust, and his eyebrows after an unfortunate incident with a bottle of Axe and a lighter, Morgan claims to have no regrets, but this reporter knows that Greg's purposeless rebellion against a well-meaning authority will just be an unpleasant memory in his future, if not, his punishment is certainly enough to make anyone think twice about what they have done.

Greg is now serving two consecutive life in-school detentions without the possibility for parole.

Biology Fetal Pig Dissection Exposes Sadist

By Gunther Hausman

DEERFIELD—For the past week, Joe Wagner's third period Honors Biology class has been dissecting fetal pigs as part of their study of Anatomy and Physiology. While this unit is always a class favorite, one student seemed to be enjoying it a lot more than the other students.

Usually quiet in class, Sophomore Sam Merki is known for being an outsider. He has few interests and participates in no extra-curricular activities. He describes himself as "a misunderstood Twilight fan who will change the world. You'll see. You'll all see."

Although he is usually detached, this past week he seemed more engaged in his own education and was eager to learn and slice up his pig.

He really seemed to be having a great time during the dissection. It was unusual," says Mr. Wagner. "At one point was chanting and coloring the pig's hooves black. I tried to stop him but he looked at me with his bloodhungry eyes and I backed off. What a disturbed child."

Sam is usually a poor student, doing just well enough to pass the class, but this unit was different. He was always one step ahead of the procedure. Classmate and lab-partner David Schermerhorn recalls his aptitude during the dissection. "Before the lab even said to remove the brain, he already had it out of the skull and was smelling it. Before we were supposed to, Sam had the intestines unraveled and was making them into bracelets."

"Sam carved a star into the pig without even being asked. Come to think of it, I'm not sure he was supposed to do that," Schermerhorn adds.

For the first time all year, Sam asked to stay after class to get ahead on work. Mr. Wager reluctantly allowed it. When he came back an hour later, he was foaming at the mouth and his pig was in a vinegar bath with pins sticking out of the eyes and abdomen. Sam claimed the pins were there so it would be easier to identify the structures the next day. He justified the vinegar bath by asking, "Can you imagine how painful it would be if that pig was alive? Imagine the squealing."

On the last day of the dissection, Merki was heard making squealing sounds while performing the dissection. Once the lab was over, he asked to bring the pig home with him to learn more about the pig's internal systems, especially the one with the blood. Sam had become quite attached to the pig and gave him the name "Filthy Disgusting Swine Junior" and would not take 'no' for an answer. Luckily his teacher was terrified of him

Mr. Wagner allowed him to continue the dissection in the social worker's office.

THE FLIPSIDE PUZZLE CHALLENGE: solve the cryptogram then find Jake Lazarus. The 1st person to find him with all the answers will win a sweet Flipside t-shirt!!

QUOTE "Is this the Flipside? I haven't been offended yet."

-Everyone who doesn't know the Flipside is in new, politically correct hands

REBUS PUZZLES

Can you guess the common word or phrase portrayed below?

X (Shakespeare 2.4.37)

tive tive
tive tive
a tive tive
tive tive
tive tive

last weeks answers: Goodbye, Polar opposites, H20, J-walking

INFOGRAPHIC

CRYPTOGRAM CHALLENGE

This is a simple substitution code. Each letter is replaced by a different letter. Try to decode the message or quote below. Congratulations to last week's winner:

Jack Mercola

Hint: E=N

"YCMRQZQYCO AGHMEZ ME PQETGW. BET, BU UCG GET, PCGE YCMRQZQYCMD UCQKH-CU CBZ TQEG MUZ AGZU, UCG PQETGW WGNBMEZ." - BRSWGT EQWUC PCMUGCGBT

LAST WEEK'S ANSWER: "What is the point of this week's cryptogram? Nobody will remember the answer by next year and I am too lazy to actually give the winner a t-shirt. Whatever. I have not innovated all year, so I might as well never. So to the few who solve this, enjoy my final, cryptogram." Sam Block

SUDOKU

Level: Made by your Deerpark friends Fill in the grid so each column, row, and 3x3 box has the numbers 1 through 9.

		9	6		8	1
	8		5		9		3
5								80
		3	1	5	6	2
		1	2	8	4	6
6								1
	9		8		7		4
		5	4		1	თ

JUMBLE

Unscramble these four ordinary jumbles, and use the letters in circles to answer the final question.

WITHA

LAST WEEKS ANSWERS: grope, stork, occult, factor What the chemistry nerd called his friend who ruined his chances of getting with a girl: a STOPCOCK (thank Sam Block for that joke)