Desperate Couple Resorts to Candy Conversation

By Joey Roberts

After several weeks of dating, an anonymous couple had broken off all contact--or so they had thought. Let us call them Barry and Sari for purposes of this article. Barry and Sari had been banned from seeing each other because of suspicions that they had been "spending too much time together," in the words of his parents.

Barry and Sari came up with a new creative plan, whereby they would take Valentine's Day candies and have them sent by mail under a pseudonym to the other. In this way, they were still able to have limited communication, in what is considered the greatest miracle of all Valentine.

Locker Decoration Best Indicator of Friendship

By Bobby Prinkus

DEERFIELD, IL—Almost a daily occurrence, some girl's locker will be decorated with cute accessories and inside jokes. When asked why this phenomenon occurred, junior Bari Kanefsky responded, "I mean come on. If we don't, like, decorate our friend's locker, then she won't, like, think we, like, like her."

A school wide poll conducted by the research department of The Flipside revealed that with the advent of Facebook, 98% of girls believe that there is no excuse for not having their locker decorated on their birthday. The other 2% believe lockers should be decorated on half birthdays as well.

Also discovered in our in-depth, MLA cited research was the tragic story of one Cara Franklin. Cara's birthday fell on a Sunday. However, her locker lay undecorated when she arrived at school at 7:00 a.m. on Sunday. Cara knew that because her friends did not decorate her locker, they clearly did not care about her.

She promptly picked new, more responsible locker-decorating friends and was treated to a life-sized lego statue of herself outside of her locker on her next birthday.

Cara sums it up best when she says, "Now I know how much my friends like me. They like me one life-sized lego statue, three snickers, four letters, plus three exclamation points, and twenty balloons."
