Bracket Analysis

By John Shineman

It's that time of year again. You guessed it. It's time to fill out those teacher tournament brackets. After many grueling hours inside their sweatshop, the Teacher Tournament Bracket Committee has announced their picks.

Some were met with surprise. I personally cannot believe that they put Huff all the way down at the five seed, but who am I to talk?

There are sure to be some intense first round games; here are a few to keep your eye on. Motzko versus Sawasko in the Math/Science division is sure to get the fans going wild. Likewise, the 3-6 Mansfield-Tanimoto matchup could go either way.

In the Social Studies/Arts division, up-and-comer Vora looks to take on the experienced Grady; only time will tell how they react under pressure. Gasper has his home court in X-hall, and this will help him take the competition to school.

Homeroom Rep Discovers That Moment of Silence Best Time to Make Announcements

By Timmy Terntable

DEERFIELD, IL—Due to a near complete lack of interest in Student Council, a helpless homeroom representative has resorted to crime in order to spread news about a food pantry sale or something. The crime: breaking a state mandated moment of silence.

However, flamboyant student council representative Zack Wolf felt he had no choice, just like with abortion. "How can I tell the kids about the used sock drive if they won't listen!?! The only time those scoundrels aren't talking is during that moment of silence. And the pledge."

Zack is not alone. In fact, almost all homerooms do not give their reps time to talk, which leads these resume building students to seek desperate measures. As Ari Richmond explains, "I just had to tell my H.R. about the leftovers drive, but I couldn't find time to talk. Yet, it was a tornado drill that day so when the inspectors weren't walking around, I got up and made my announcements. Take that, you rascals!"

Unfortunately for Ari, a over-serious homeroom teacher full-on body tackled her when she stood up, braking three bones and her heart.

The percentage of people who have picked sixteen seeds over one seeds in their brackets. And out of these people, all of them have done it as a joke, or went to Portland State. Even then, it is no guarantee.

FACT

The latest construction of the Great Wall of China took place in Ming Dynasty and the length built was over 6,000 kilometers. However, the total length built in all dynasties will exceed 50,000 kilometers.
