Popular Demand Leads to New Call of Duty Class

As kids continue to lose hours of their lives at seemingly the blink of the eye, DHS has decided to calm the COD mobsters and give them what they want: a sixteen person competitive, multiplayer class. Within two hours, students sent their Xbox live applications to reserve their spot in one of the remaining two class slots, as fourteen were filled during COD class BETA. And one class was reserved for the cool teachers who play videogames.

The class is not without controversy. Currently, grades are based on a student's kill to death ratio. Some feel this is unfair, as they like to tactically snipe peoples heads off from a distance, watching their blood slowly trickle off their severed body. Others like to run around like a suicide bomber with their shotgun, racking up kills with a mediocre kill to death ratio. These unskilled fools are asking for a point-based system. Perks are for extra credit. Either way, your voice will be heard: so long as you have a headset.

Each year can move up a prestige, all in preparation for college. In college, of course, the only thing you do is play videogames.

Currently, honors World of War is being provided through the more historically rooted social studies department. It is taught by COD fanatic Ms. Kaplann. The far superior AP Modern Warfare class is being considered an applied art class, as the entire department has been having competitive LAN matches for years. Rumor is, it gets pretty viscous. No matter which class, just sign me up. Oh yeah, and for my other classes, just write me a pass.

Isn't This Awkward?

Stuck here between two stories, I feel like a freshman trying to call myself out of class for the first time. I'm just a little insecure and a little stupid. I am not even a whole column length!

It's like a really cute girl talking to me for the first time. All they really want is the answers to the math homework, but they feel obligated to say some pleasantries before getting to the good stuff. I'm just filler. You probably don't even know my name!

Look. They even gave me a little picture. It's like getting a sixth place ribbon in track... in a race with six people. We recognize you exist... Congratulations.

This is a train wreck. It reminds me of that one convo I had with that cute girl. I made a filibuster joke. Oops. I tried to cover that up with an allusion to Hamlet. Double oops. How to end such a waste of space, that is the question. Ironic, it is not even a question mark in that sentence.

Senioritis Like This

By: Kelly Clarkson

What if I told you it was all meant to be
No more finals for me
Time to watch a lot of TV
It's almost that feelin'
From back in Elementary
So tell me that you don't think I'm crazy
When I tell you I'm done doing homework
here and now

Senioritis like this
Some people wait a lifetime
For a moment like this
Some people search forever
For that one special disease
Ohh, I can't believe it's happening to me
Some people worked four years
For Senioritis like this

Everything changes
But other grades still must try
Something so stress free
I can't explain
Well I maybe dreamin'
But 'till I awake
Can we make this dream last forever
And I'll cherish all the free periods we share

Senioritis like this
Some people wait a lifetime
To never have to go to gym
Some people search forever
For the courage to call yourself out
Ohh, I can't believe it's happening to me
I think I'll take every Tuesday off
For Senioritis like this

Could this be the greatest time of all
I don't care where I will be next fall
So let me tell you this

Some people wait a lifetime

For Senioritis like this
I'm not going to clear my lunch tray
For a moment like this
Time to start worrying about Prom
For that one special kiss
Ohh, I can't believe they took the heaters away from me
Some people didn't work four years
For Senioritis like this [THE END]

And the crowd goes wild. Then to Chipotle.

NUMBERS: #

The number sign. I am alluding to the age-old debate of "is the number sign is in fact a number?" It has divided math departments, multiplied nerd based violence, and subtracted letters from swear words like @##. No matter how you add it up, it all equates to about the same thing.

FACT:

South Park is the best school you know, the best school in Illinois. The kids are nice and they learn a lot of things, but then they have to go to Caruso, which just sucks. Especially compared to Shepard. Or Schechter. Or Holy Cross. Or whatever that other school is called. Nobody went there.
