

Senior Discovers New Way To Succeed, Calls It "Studying"

By Trixie Dewdrop
Deerfield High School senior Edwin Rush made a remarkable discovery last week when he discovered a new strategy to get good grades. He calls it "studying."

"I just like, sat there and worked, dude. For like an hour. Then I got a solid C... Weird, right?" Rush told The Flipside.

"I just think this is something that could, in the future, be really helpful," he continued, "like those stairs for cats they advertise on TV."

Like so many great inventions, Rush's idea of "studying" came about accidentally when he mistakenly brought home his math book instead of his lacrosse equipment. After tripping over a hamper and falling face-first onto the book, he opened it up and was surprised to find chapters and chapters of helpful material.

"Things actually started making sense after about an hour," Rush said. "It's like cheating, almost. All the answers to the questions on the test are in here! It's crazy-go-nuts!"

While the results of Rush's discovery have proven successful for some, others still struggle to succeed in their classes. "I get the math," senior Darcy Cotton said. "I just keep getting D's because I like making cool designs out of the answers on my Scan-Tron. Look, a double helix!"

Regardless, Rush still stands by his methods. "If studying for a math test works, who's to say that it couldn't work in other classes too," he mused excitedly. "Heck, I might even try it out before my next history class if my teacher gives me permission."

Many are wondering what others inventions Rush has in store for the world. When asked by a fan what other innovations he had in mind, he responded, "Hmmm... Well, like, you know how everyone loves the iPod touch? Well, what if they made a really, really, big iPod touch? Ahhhh... A man can dream, right?"

Cuppy Coffee Admits To Steroid Use For Dunkin Donuts® Races

By Jefferey Hoodaman
CHICAGO, IL -- Track star Cuppy Coffee has acknowledged using steroids to prepare for numerous Dunkin Donuts® Races. He is scheduled to plead guilty today in New York to two counts of lying to federal agents about his drug use and for spilling all over a Chicago businessman's lap, permanently staining his fresh pair of slacks.

Jones, who won hundreds races held in the United Center, said he took a steroid, known on the black market as "Java Chip," for two years beginning in 2002, according to a letter released to the public.

"I want to apologize to you all for all of this," Coffee said. "Though I am proud of my fans for redeeming the free cappucinos that my victories guaranteed, I am sorry for disappointing you all in so many ways."

Coffee's admissions could cost him several hundred gold medals he won during timeouts during the late third quarter of Chicago Bulls' home games. Coffee's admission enlarges the cloud of doubt hovering over Dunkin Donuts races, which have been tarred in recent years with accusations of performance-enhancement. "Frankly, I'm not surprised," World Anti-Doping Chairman Dick-

Pound said in a telephone interview. "I've always been suspicious...I guess Coffee's just never been my cup of tea."

Korea Just Needs To Like, Chill Brah. Nah, But Like, For Real.

Guest Opinion

I usually don't get into politics, brah. It's really not my thing. Well actually, I have flipped past CNBC on my way to SpikeTV a couple times. That's about it though.

But like, honestly, sometimes I just feel bad for these losers 'cause they're clueless. These chumps walk around talking like they just studied the Wall Street or somethin', but they don't know jack. Whenever dudes start busting out the whole current events thing, I'm like, "dawg, the Soviet Union beat the Confederacy. Get over it!" And they shut up after that. Especially when I flex.

So of course, people are freakin' about Korea and nuclear bombs and stuff these days. I'm gonna make a few things clear before I go max out my bench press, brah.

I know a lot about this whole Korea problem, and how the East Korea is all like "West Koreans are a bunch of chumps," and we get all scared and stuff and have meetings in the House of Congress or whatever. Boo-hoo. But honestly, what's there to be scared of? Have you seen that King Kong guy, the one everyone's freakin' out about? I was probably bigger than him as a fetus! And he always has that look on his face like he just got interrupted in the middle of going number two, and he's all clenched up and wants to get back in there and finish the job. Am I right or am I right, brah?

And as far as the whole dictator thing goes, if these Koreans are voting for Communism, you gotta let them live the way they want to. But I'm not about to let them take over our government too. So all these "red states" in America, listen up: we will bomb each and every one of you! Get cozy with the Koreans if you want, but when you wake up and you're sleeping in a giant crater where your house used to be, don't say I didn't warn you. Brah, That's a red scare if I ever heard one.

Aight dawg, gotta go do cardio. So Koreans: figure it out, and don't make me buy a plane ticket and come over there.

The Pros & Cons of 2011

Pros

•My mom said she might buy me a sweatshirt from Sports Authority

Cons

- "Two-thousand eleven" is a mouthful
- Transformers 3 will come out, I'll have to watch it
- US fiscal crisis will continue as GDP growth of 2.5% is still too slow
- Thousands of foreclosures as residential real estate does not improve
- Food, oil, and natural gas inflation
- Increased turmoil as Israel and Palestinians fail to reach peace agreement
- Nuclear Iran
- Possible alien invasion. Seriously though, you never know...
- Only one more year until 2012
