

New Community Service Club to Come to DHS

By Pip Wootergotten

As the pressure sets in for upperclassmen to get into their dream schools (or any school at all), junior Marty Parker suddenly realized that Deerfield was desperately in need of another community service club. His new club will be kicking off next week, and Parker claims it will offer students a chance to finally uphold their roles in their beloved community. However, he says he is taking a more unique approach to helping others.

Parker admits that the club still has a couple kinks to work out, but he already has a line-up for their first few charitable acts: next Wednesday, everyone will gather in the cafeteria at the end of D lunch and eat all unbought cookies of the day. Ice cream, cake, and pudding may be involved as well (but only if it's the new kind with the marshmallows).

Parker is looking forward to the new opportunities that the innovative club is giving him and his fellow students. "We're working to make DHS a less wasteful environment, and by eating these cookies, DHS will become a greener school. I just want really want to give back, ya know?" said Parker.

The next few weeks will consist of activities such as approving the safety of the high ropes course in the IM gym and fundraising money for weekly shopping sprees in order to improve the overall economy of Deerfield. The club members also hope to do a town-wide cleaning of local fountains using various soaps and detergents. "I'm not sure if that's how they're supposed to be cleaned...but it's definitely the effort that counts," said Parker.

So far, about 10 people have committed to the club, and many more have shown interest. While many of the students do not have the same selfless qualities as Parker's generous and hard-working personality, the free t-shirts Parker is giving out seem to be helping his cause. And freshman Nathan Shay says, "I'm only going to the meeting because Marty said there'd be food."

With an ambitious goal of spearheading a new club at DHS, Flipside reporters asked Parker what inspired him to create this community service club. He said, "It was just something that my heart told me to do. It had nothing to do with the fact that it looks good on college applications. Nothing. At all."

Justin Bieber Announces Plan to Go Metal

By Elodin

LOS ANGELES, CA---Teen hair icon and "singing" sensation Justin Bieber announced in a recent statement that he is in the process of recording a new single which, he claims, will completely revolutionize his image.

"I used to make a bunch of really simple pop songs," the young Canadian explained. "But I think it's time I expanded my horizons. This time, I've decided to record my first metal song."

Reports indicate that Bieber's entrance into puberty has also played a role in this surprising career turn. The new "changes" were making it harder for JBiebz to hit those high notes over and over again, so his producers are hoping that the screaming will cover up the voice cracks.

In a separate interview, Bieber explained that, "I know the song is metal because it has a guitar in it. An electric guitar. I even had my producer put some distortion in it. That's just how I roll, I like to push the envelope. Also, I've gotten way more complex with my lyrics. In previous songs, like 'Baby,' the chorus was catchy, but not very imaginative. This song, which will be called 'Puppy Love' has two words in the chorus. That's right, two whole words!"

A ripe mix of apprehension and excitement await the debut of this sure-to-be revolutionizing song, but one thing is for certain: with or without a hit, Bieber will still be able to maintain control over his army of zombie-fangirls with just a glance out of those dreamy eyes and a swish of that ungelled hair.
