

Budding Entrepreneurs of Honors Incubator Break the Fursuit Industry

As a result of the growing popularity of Mr. Navickas' Honors Incubator class at DHS, students have invented many different unique products and marketing strategies. One group of students in particular began to gain a lot of traction online for their creative designs and marketing. However, Mr. Navickas was reported to have said that he wasn't too happy as their product was, in his words, "Almost too realistic." The aforementioned students designed a diverse line of products in the fursuit industry. These students—whose business operated under the name of "Amazon RainFurrest"—got lots of attention on their main marketplace, the subreddit r/furry_irl, for showing high amounts of resemblance to real animals. In a column about Amazon Rain-Furrest, Reddit user u/furdaddy2005 said, "I love how realistic the color palette is, these fursuits have really got my tail sticking up!" Due to their popularity online and great marketing, Amazon Rain-Furrest fursuits will be on display and up for sale this coming December in Rosemont, IL at the Midwest FurFest. In fact, in a shocking poll from an AP Statistics class reported the percentage of DHS students who identify as furry or furligned has increased to a whopping 5%. AP Statistics teacher Mrs. Bassler said, "We haven't seen furry growth like this since the 'Great Conversion' of '14." Although the fursuits have had tons of success online, some questions have been raised by those unfamiliar with the furry community regarding their validity. A well-meaning reporter for TheFlipside asked one of Amazon RainFurrest's customers at DHS if they liked pretending to have an alternate persona while in the fursuit, and he got a very sharply raised eyebrow. They told him, "My fursona isn't any make-believe, this is who I am." The student explained that they face discrimination regularly at school. "They wouldn't even let me near the therapy dogs last week on account of them getting 'too excited,'" they barked, "It's not my fault that I'm hot!" Mr.

Navickas, who was initially proud of the students for their product garnering the most revenue of any student-run business in the history of the Incubator class, released a statement regarding Amazon RainFurrest. "This was never my intention, I send my deepest apologies to the Paws for Patrick foundation for the incident," he wrote. Mr. Navickas also promised that the Honors Incubator class would send financial compensation to pay for therapy for the therapy dogs. In the wake of all this news, the students of Amazon RainFurrest have been forced to stop production as a result of their publicity attracting the ire of PETA. The group has also dropped the Honors Incubator class out of embarrassment.

-Zach Stutland

Staff

Noah Meyerhoff
Co-Editor In Chief

Eli Austin
Co-Editor In Chief

Zach Stutland
Staff Writer

Connor Vishnoi
Staff Writer, Photo-editing

Yaokai Yang
Staff Writer

Chris Rock
Staff Writer

*If You'd Like to Join
The Flipside Staff or
Be a Guest Writer,
Email the Editors*

*noah.meyerhoff@gmail.com
ea.austica@gmail.com*

International Gamer Council (IGC) Passes "Nighttime Savings" Resolution.

Pg. thelegendz7

Flipside Staff Member Assaulted By Will Smith For Joking About His Wife. Pg. 19

Investigation of Student Council Yields SHOCKING Results

By this point, I'm pretty sure everyone north of Chicago knows that District 113 is on the economic naughty list with its "structural budget deficit." The community is very disappointed. As much as I'd love to chalk this up to the obvious—spectacular administrative failure—further investigation by the Flipside Select Committee has determined that the real perpetrators behind the disappearing budget is actually the DHS Student Council. GASP!

After interviewing the alumni of the elite institution, we are convinced the only reason someone would willingly inject themselves into school politics would be for the seductive snacks. As such, the student leadership there must draw in uncorrupted blood with promises of nourishment before school starts. However, where do you think they get the money for all their morning treats? Our investigation—digging through the garbage bins that they fill with their delicious little bribes—reveals they've been sapping District 113's budget since as early as 2019. Their seemingly emptied candy wrappers and donut containers are, in fact, filled with avarice and embezzlement. And to think Earthworks has to pick up after this garbage every week!

William M. "Boss" Tweed, infamous Tammany Hall politician who embezzled millions from New York City, has been elected President of Student Council.

We must demand serious restructurings of this corrupted institution to ensure this kind of budget mismanagement never happens again. Just last month, the Council voted to cut our budget, mumbling something about "unethical reporting" and whatnot. Why? Because our illegal wire tap was inches away from discovering their money laundering operation. We would like to remind them that the only "unethical" thing in our school has been their purchase of a "wicked party yacht" with the district's generous funding—and your taxpayer dollars!

Here at the Flipside, we are committed to giving an unbiased student perspective on the situations around our community, and part of that duty includes calling out corruption when it happens. Every moment we hesitate to act, Mr. Comerford is closer to being usurped by some self-serving parvenus. We promise the Flipside harbors no ill-intentions towards the individual members of Student Council, we just simply disagree with their overpriced "crowdfunding" efforts. That said, we might be persuaded to overlook all of this if, hmm...a seat on the Council were offered?

-Yaokai Yang

The Flipside

Alternate Universe Update: Today is April Sincerity Day. Every other day of the year, pranks and lies are fair game, and society has crumbled as it is impossible to trust anyone. Brave leaders emerge from the alleyways of America's decaying cities, scrambling to find a way to renew civilization in 24 hours.

This Week's Number

4/1

It's Here!

Chirps

We chirp anyone who gets asked out on April Fools' Day.

We chirp the School Day SAT for being totally obsolete.

Out-of-Context Quote of the Week

"Size does matter."

-Yikes, I don't even wanna say...

Rebuses!!!

The closest thing to a pun that you'll ever find in our paper.

YOUR DAD HERE!

This Week's Dad

Name:

Brian Stutland

Date of Birth:

7/22/75

Occupation:

C.T.O. at Equity Armor Investments

Child at DHS:

Zach Stutland

Favorite Artist:

The Notorious B.I.G.

Hobbies:

"Arguing with rival DYBA dads."

If you would like your own father to be featured in The Flipside, email Noah Meyerhoff at noah.meyerhoff@gmail.com for more information. First come, first serve.

The Infographic

Top 5 EPIC!!! April Fools' Pranks

5. Max your Mom's credit card!

Money doesn't count today, right?

4. Break up with your boyfriend!

LOL!!! He's gonna be so surprised!!!

3. Say something really offensive!

You can always just take it back.

2. Tell your boyfriend "I love you!"

Ooh, I wonder what he'll think!

Hi, everyone. This is going to be our last issue of The Flipside this year. We don't have the budget. I really don't know if we can bring it back next year. I know this looks like a joke but we're being serious, thanks for the laughs.